

Slavic Linguistics Society

REPORT from the business meeting, September 2009, at the Fourth SLS Conference, Zadar, Croatia

A brief update for those of you who were unable to attend the recent meeting in Zadar

First, thanks to all participants and to the tireless organizers, especially Damir and Gosia Cavar, but also their students and colleagues, and to Dunja Brozovic, for making it a very successful (and enjoyable) meeting!

Second, next year will be in Chicago. Lenore Grenoble and/or Victor Friedman will be providing information about the meeting as it becomes available.

Third, there were two proposals for 2011: Aix-en-Provence and Ohrid. This will need to be resolved by the Chicago meeting. People spoke on behalf of both venues.

Fourth, JSL 17 is now out, it is a special double issue on sociolinguistics. If you are a paid member you should be receiving it soon. Speaking of which ... it is important that subscription memberships be kept up to date. For details, see: <http://www.slavica.com/jsl/index.html>

Finally, and on that same theme, please encourage your students and colleagues to join SLS if they are not members.
